

Coastal Buildings Design Review Community Reference Group

Participant agreement

Background

Moreton Bay is one of the fastest growing regions in Australia, so it's important we have sustainable building designs and planning policies in place that reflect our community's changing needs, while ensuring we 'Go Green as we Grow'.

By building up existing urban areas, Council can both accommodate for future housing requirements while reducing the impact of development in rural or natural places.

Through Moreton Says surveys residents have told MBRC it's important that the existing identity of the region is protected. Our region has some great examples of existing urban areas that can accommodate new homes of many different shapes and sizes if we get the planning right.

This study looks at various design features that make up our coastal buildings, such as the proportions of building, building separation and setbacks, overshadowing, creating interesting frontages, and sub-tropical design features such as balconies, green roofs and walls.

We are forming a Community Reference Group (CRG) to help us dig deeper and understand what the community of the study area for this project values, so we can make informed decisions on your behalf.

It's important to us that residents are involved in planning so we can provide greater transparency to our community. We will work together and incorporate community values into planning for your neighbourhood where possible.

Sign up for the CRG to be a voice for the community to Council.

Purpose

This Participant Agreement relates to the CRG established for Study Area A (Redcliffe Peninsula and Deception Bay).

Council and our planning consultants, Fourfold, will work with the CRG to:

- understand community values and views on coastal buildings design impacts, challenges and opportunities
- develop shared principles to address building design and planning outcomes.

The CRG will play an important role in advising Council and making recommendations on policies for governing future growth in the area.

Those policies may influence future amendments to the Moreton Bay Regional Council (MBRC) Planning Scheme.

Participant's role

As part of the Community Reference Group you will:

- attend four (4) three-hour workshops and complete any requested pre-reading of project documents and post-workshop activities
- be a voice for the community into the project and build awareness across your local networks.
- undertake an individual activity to create a visual map of your local area (approx. 1.5 hours)

At the workshops, you will work with other group members to gather community insights into place values, issues and aspirations to inform future building design policies.

A summary of the discussions during the workshops will form part of the report taken to Council.
